Andrew Laufer

Andrew Laufer is currently a gentleman farmer, storyteller, poet, and author. His recently published book, Papa Laufer's Stories: Positive Reflections of Life in America, is a collection of single page, thought provoking stories about his life experiences, well received by readers all over the country. Thirteen of the 183 stories in the book are illustrated, bringing the stories to life. The life stories Andrew tells on stage have been adapted from his book, which can be found on Amazon.

Gloria Jones

Gloria Jones is a writer, artist, retired schoolteacher, wife, mother of three and grandmother of five. She was raised by two schoolteachers, and learned to love acting and literature. After retiring from teaching, Gloria wrote plays and performed in plays in the Sacramento area.

Gloria has published two books, one deriving from a story she told at Celebration ArtsTheater. The latest book is "The Jacket", a story of life from the jacket's point of view. Contact: gloriajones@yahoo.com

Janice Curtis Greene

Janice Curtis Greene is an author and master storyteller, an American griot, keeping the history and culture of the African Diaspora alive. She is Past President and Life Member of the Griots' Circle of Maryland, Inc., and the National Association of Black Storytellers.

Janice mesmerizes her audiences with folktales, original and personal stories and Bible Stories set to syncopated rap rhythms. Her poem "Black Women in Power" is featured in the book, "Dear Kamala". Commissioner Greene serves on the Maryland Commission on African American History and Culture.

Stories in Living Color is an ongoing project of the Storytelling Association of California (SAC), teaming up storytellers of different races, or communities that face discrimination, to work on paired stories that illustrate issues regarding race, racism, or discrimination.

The stories themselves, and the conversations between the tellers and the emcee, have the same focus: to inform us, and move us further towards the inclusion and respect of all peoples of America.

Emcee: Khader Abdi

Khader Abdi is a storyteller, a stand-up comedian, and an improviser. He is delighted to be part of today's program and hopes to bring joy to all of you.
